HOWARD BRAME

Maimed In a Corn Shredder In a Horrible Manner.Loses His Left Arm and the Fingers of His Right Hand.

Howard Brame, a young farmer of Longview, was the victim of a horrible accident Saturday while operating a corn shredder. In some way his hands were caught in the machine and his arms pulled in and fearfully mangled. The young man's arms clogged the machine and stopped its motion. It was several minutes before he could be released. Both arms were found to be horribly crushed and stripped of flesh. Mr. Brame with wonderful nerve walked to the house and sent for a doctor and directed the relief that the men on the place could give him. Dr. Austin Bell soon arrived and found that the left arm would have to be amputated above the elbow and that the right arm was in almost as bad a condition. The little finger was gone, the forearm was stripped of flesh and the bones of the elbow were crushed. The young man was so weakened from the loss of blood that he could not undergo the amputation for 24 hours.

The operation was performed Sunday, the left arm and all the fingers of the right hand except the thumb and forefinger being removed.

Mr. Brame stood the operation well and was yesterday reported to be doing reasonably well, though there is still doubt of his recovery.

He is a young man about 27 years old, a nephew of Mrs. H. A. Rogers, of this city. His mother, who lives in Carlisle, Ark., was sent for and Mrs. Rogers at once went to her nephew's bedside.

TAYLOR ON THE ELECTION

Says the Victory For Gov. Beckham Means He is Banished.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 8.—W.
S. Taylor, the deposed Governor of Kentucky, who is under indictment for conspiracy in the Goebel murder, and is a refugee here, takes a gloomy view of the situation in his State. He said today that if Beckham is elected he felt as if he was banished from the State, and that the people there do not recognize the enormity of the offense that the Democratic party has committed against personal liberty and the rights of the people. He does not look for any relief for Howard and Powers from the Court of Appeals, even if O'Rear is elected.
He said the new court will not be organized until January.

When asked if a Republican Court of Appeals would have any effect on determining his return to Kentucky Mr. Taylor refused to say anything.

TOBACCO BARN BURNED.

Product of Twenty-One Acres Destroyed by Fire.

Crofton, Ky., Nov. 9.—The large tobacco barn of Mr. Daniel Wilburn, of near Mannington, was destroyed by fire last night. The building contained the product of twenty-one acres of fine tobacco, which was also reduced to ashes.
The barn was a comparatively new one and cost several hundred dollars. Mr. Wilburn's loss is estimated at not less than one thousand dollars. He had no insurance. He had, a few days before the fire, sold his tobacco for six and four cents, but had not commenced delivering the weed. The barn caught from sparks from a saw-mill located about two hundred feet away, which were blown to the building by a strong wind. It took hard work to save other houses situated near the barn.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Marion Moore Killed By a Runaway Team.Thrown From His Wagon and Skull Fractured on a Stone.

Marion Moore, a farmer living several miles from town on the Buttermilk road, was killed in a runaway accident Saturday afternoon. He left town late in the day driving a team of mules and when about two miles from town the mules ran away. Mr. Moore was thrown from his wagon and his head was crushed on a stone. He was picked up and taken into the house of G. G. Gay, but died in a few minutes. Mr. Moore was 54 years old and was a well known man in his section of the county. He leaves a large family.

DR. CLARK INDICTED.

Held to Answer a Charge of Murder.

Morganfield, Ky., Nov. 9.—The grand jury to-day returned an indictment into Circuit Court charging Dr. N. A. Clark with murder.
The crime with which Dr. Clark is charged is said to have been committed in his drug store at Star-gis about two months ago, at which time Miss Cora Waller died, it is alleged as a result of the criminal operation. Her escort Tom Holt then and there suicided over her dead body.

The trial was set for Tuesday, November 27th, which is the 20th day of the term.

FROST AT LAST.

Followed By a Touch of Real Wintry Weather.

The first frost that destroyed vegetation came on the morning of the 10th, following close upon the freeze of the 9th. The late fall was brought to a sudden end and wintry weather has been on us for several days. Wind and sleet on Sunday succeeded the ice and frost and from now on we will doubtless be kept wondering what will happen next.

of Mr. and Mrs. Joe N. Fowright, of Madisonville, formerly of this city, died last Friday morning at 1 o'clock.

Death was due to congestion of the brain, caused from teething.

TRAMP KILLED.

Was Sitting on Track Asleep near Dawson.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 8.—An unknown white tramp, about 28 years old, was struck by an extra northbound freight train on the Illinois Central, near Dawson, Ky., this morning, and instantly killed. He was sitting on the track asleep.

There is not much use in talking about the "reorganization of the Democratic party" unless we make the prodigals give bond to stay in after they get back.

ATTITUDE OF RAILROADS.

Prompt Assistance Rendered by Them at Galveston.

The popular belief that large corporations are relentless under all circumstances where profits are at stake, has received a gratifying "shock" in so far as the attitude of the railroads since the Galveston storm is concerned, as the following will show:

Morning Post, Raleigh, N. C.: The Concord Tribune says: "We have all heard a great deal about the corporations being soulless. This may be true. They are at least stern business institutions. What we want to say is that when a disaster of the Galveston nature comes the people are absolutely at the mercy of the corporations, and in a measure look to them for relief. Just now the railroad, express and telegraph companies are 'doing no little toward the relief of the Galveston sufferers, and deserve due credit for what they are doing. It's true they have large business interests there, and suffer from a financial standpoint, but it is due those companies, soul or no soul, to say they can and do do a great good when there is suffering to be relieved."

This is true and just. But for the prompt generosity of these corporations in such emergencies, the suffering would be multiplied many fold. And it is not only the promptness with which they respond, but the free transportation of supplies and all things necessary to alleviate the suffering, whether provided by governmental or individual charity, that deserves commendation. It costs as much for train fares for such occasion as it does to run similar trains for profit. Yet there is not a railroad company or an express or telegraph company in the land that would not be and has not been prompt to render every service that emergency could call for without price. Then the Philadelphia Press intimated the other day that it had nurses and medical supplies and a trainload of provisions for Galveston, these things had scarcely been gathered together before the Southern had its train of cars and comfortable coaches at the Quaker City depot, and so soon as all could be loaded and gotten on board was speeding through the South, with absolute right-of-way of trackage, in its mission of mercy. It is due to say that either of the other great systems reaching into the South would have cheerfully performed the same service to the extent of its system.

Yet these great institutions of charity, as well as of enterprise, are the objects of special assault and expression by the little souls who constitute the demagogue element of society. When these corporations are not cut down to the lowest limit in their traffic receipts they are singled out for burdensome, unequal and unequal taxation, thus cutting them both ways. And if they object to being thus robbed, they are held up constantly by accusations of the people.

Honest people are fast learning to place the proper estimate upon the virtues and ambitious demagogues, and to appreciate and to protect in all things that are just, those great agencies of good as well as of material development—New Orleans "Times-Democrat."

In a republic it is patriotic to accept of the truth.

STEAMSHIP TRUST

Combination of Trans-Atlantic Steamship Companies Being Rumored at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 8.—Rumors were current today concerning a combination of trans-Atlantic steamship companies which will involve several companies and many millions of dollars. It was said that the Atlantic Transport Company, which operates lines of steamships between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and London, will be a part of the combination. Bernard N. Baker, president of the company, when seen today said: "I have nothing to give out."

Others interested in the company were equally reticent, but it was learned from an apparently reliable source that negotiations are going on in New York and that a representative of the Atlantic Transport Company is in that city looking after its interests.

Color is given to the rumor by the strength of the Atlantic Transport Company stock on the exchange to day. There was an active inquiry for it on the board and on the curb, but the only sale recorded in the early dealings was ten shares at $50, an advance of 15 points compared with the last preceding sale. Since Aug. 30 the stock has risen 45 points.

Details of the deal are carefully guarded, but it is understood that the stockholders of the Atlantic Transport Company will receive more than $200 per share for their holdings, in the event of a consummation of the deal.

The Atlantic Transport Company has in service now seventeen vessels, ranging in tonnage from 4,250 to 13,240. The Minnetonka and the Minnewaska, now building at Belfast, Ireland, will be launched next spring and placed in the New York London trade. They will be 13,240 ton vessels and similar in design to those now building for the company by the Maryland Steel Company. Besides these vessels, the company is building two at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company, at Camden, N. J., and will shortly award contracts for two more. The latter vessels will probably be built at Norwich, Conn.

The ships now in service are the Minnetonka, Mesaba, Manitowish, Menominee, Marquette, Mohawk, Michigan, America, Europe and Manhattan on the New York-London route; Montana, Minnesota, Mackinac and Maryland on the Baltimore and Philadelphia-London route. The company also owns the Maine, which is in the service of the British Government as a hospital ship.

Substitution Is Suspicious.

The attempt by a dealer to sell his customer a substitute in place of the article he has been called to once places that dealer under the ban of suspicion. The only reason why the buyer does not invariably realize the suspiciousness of substitution and promptly reject it, is probably because in many cases the money transaction involved is so small that it does not suggest the motive for fraud. Suppose a jeweler advertises a diamond at $50.00. He places it in his window. A would-be buyer enters the store and asks for this particular diamond. But the jeweler says: "I can give you that diamond if you want it, but here's another that's just as good as the one advertised."

The buyer's suspicions would be aroused at once. He would insist on the stone in the window and keep an eye on it to see it wasn't changed. But in the case of a fifty-cent transaction it is different. The buyer often accepts the substitute which is offered as "just as good" as a widely advertised article, although substitution is just as suspicious in a fifty-cent transaction as in one involving fifty dollars.

Look at the question from another point of view. A sale of stock is advertised. There are horses with pedigrees and records to be sold. Farmer Brown attends the sale with the purpose of buying one of these good horses. But the seller says to him, "That horse you want is a good horse, of course, but I've got another here that is just as good, which I'd like to sell you."

"Has he just as good a pedigree?"

"Well, no, he hasn't any pedigree to speak of."

"Has he any record?"

"Well, no, we never had a watch on him that I know of, but he's just as good as the horse you want."

Would Farmer Brown buy the "just as good" horse? The question answers itself. And yet this same farmer will allow himself to be swayed time and again by accepting "just as good" articles in place of those he called for. The article he called for has, so to speak, a pedigree and a record. It's a standard in the markets of the world. Yet in place of this standard article he will accept a substitute which nobody knows anything about, an untied, unproved article which has no record of value, and no proof of origin.

Let the buyer who is offered a substitute bear in mind that substitution is suspicious, and that a substitute always carries the earmarks of a swindle.

People Of Prominence.

Miss Hattie Lee Johnston, of Hopkinsville, Ky., is a young lady who is fast forging to the front in the new guard of Kentucky fiction writers. Her first novel, "The City of Sin," has been a financial success, and was the fad of last season at the Southern and Eastern summer resorts. She is preparing to spend next winter in France, collecting material for her new novel, "The Golden Age of Virginia," shortly to be issued.

Her first novel has been translated into French by M. Baucris, and is published by Maguire & Co. Miss Johnston is a niece of Gen. Alford Sidney Johnston, and is a rarely beautiful young woman. Last week the waxwaxing Mrs. L. L. Donaldson, of Dayton, Tenn., and was a joint guest of honor with his Honor, Benton McMillin, Governor of Tennessee, at a reception given by Mrs. W. C. Gardinier, one of the wealthiest society women of Dayton. Other guests of honor were Miss Sallie Frazier, of Chattanooga, and Mrs. Donaldson. A friend of Miss Johnston says of the occasion: "Fruits and all of the delicacies of the season were served in courses. In the morning beautiful children sang sacred songs. Throughout the day the softest and the sweetest music floated in the rose-scented air. Miss Frazier rendered several classic compositions from the masters. Among them were Liszt, Chopin and Moszkowski. The Governor congratulated Miss Johnston and expressed his desire to read her forthcoming book, 'The Golden Age of Virginia.' He was quite animated in conversation. His language was like a conservatory in which were the choicest exotics of speech, as his lips continually dropped diamonds, pearls, emeralds and topaz thoughts, in rare richness. His uoicic features constantly reflected these jewels in the sparkle and changing lines of a prism. Mrs. Gardinier is a woman born to the purple, and is dark and rich hearted as a wine-red jewel. She was widely traveled, and has many times visited England, where she was presented at the court of Her Royal Majesty, Queen Victoria, and was greatly admired." Miss Johnston is related to Mary Johnston, the authoress of "To Have and To Hold," but as yet has not taken to the colonial age for her inspiration. In the forthcoming book she will invade that period of the history of America, and her friends are predicting much for her talents. Her chief characteristics, literary, are imagination, romance, and the gift of beautiful words for the expression of her thoughts. Her power of selecting beautiful, poetic words amounts to absolute genius.

BRYAN'S POSITION

Would Not Accept the Senatorship From Nebraska.

New York, Nov. 8.—The Evening Journal prints the following telegram from Wm. J. Bryan: "Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 8.—To the Editor of the Evening Journal: You may say officially that under no circumstances would I accept the office of United States Senator, even if it were tendered me. I made my fight for the presidency and I lost. I am not going to take other men's positions from them."

THE COMRADE.

Friend, as thou ploddest up and down, A pilgrim o'er earth's varied ways, By mud, or earth, or steepled town, Or hillside bare with purple haze, If thou wouldst view the prospect wide With rainbow vision, there is one Whom thou shouldst summon to thy side For all thy wanderings' truth the sun.

If, in the path steep or long,
Will ever lift the word of cheer, Or some inspiring tale of strife For soul's sake in thine ear.

If life assail, a grisly hand, Thy cloudy threat will be dispel With promise of some potent hand The grim conspiracy to quell.

Still will he bear the buoyant part When life's last hour is fast at hand, And if thou dost take'st life to heart Thou mayest meet Death with fearless eyes!

A REAL MANAGER

BY MORRIS WADE.

"Yes, Maria Kent was a real manager, if ever there was one in this world."

Old Mrs. Todd helped herself to another spoonful of mashed potatoes, saying as she did so:

"I declare if your mashed potato don't have a taste I don't find in any one else's mashed potato, Maria Reese."

Mrs. Todd was spending the day with Mrs. Reese. She was having what she called a "real visit." They were at the dinner-table, and Mrs. Todd's nimble tongue ran as she ate, so that some of her utterances were thick and muffled.

"As I was saying," she resumed, as she poured a spoonful of brown gravy over the potato, "Maria Kent is a real manager. You know she married Harvey Kent when he hadn't a thing but the little old farm his father had left him, and it was all under mortgage, and all the buildings were run down and Harvey himself was a good deal run down."

I will say for Maria that she straightened Harvey out mighty quick, if she did boss him all his life afterward. She made him hustle from the day she married him. That was a part of her managing."

La, she was a driver, Maria was. Up before daylight in the mornin' and on the go until she tumbled into bed at night. There wasn't no time wasted on that place, nor no money, either. Maria managed both time and money so well that it was no wonder that she and Harvey was the best off of any of the farmer folk around here when they died five years ago. And they died in the harness."

"I never knew them very well," said Mrs. Kent. "You know that they died soon after we came into this neighborhood to live."

"So they did. I was thinking that you knew them. I know them both from the day they were knee-high to a duck, and I said when Maria married Harvey that no one need worry about them not getting along for I knew that Maria was a born manager, and it wasn't a month before things began to look mighty different around the old Kent place, and I reckon that Harvey did more work in that one month than he had ever done before in any one year of his life."

And Maria helped him keep it up. She took right hold of the reins and she drove the rest of her life. They had bought 50 acres of land joinin' Harvey's place before they had been married two years, and when they had been five years married they owned an eighty hundred acres of ground and had begun to build a big new barn. Maybe it didn't take Maria to do that."

"How did they do it?"

"Well, they just saved and saved. Never spent a cent they didn't have to, and made every cent they did spend go as far as other folks two cents go. Never wasted no time."

You never caught them at parties or celebrations, nor going 'sist' to no entertainin' company, nor buyin' a thing they didn't really need. When they had been married seven years Maria's best dress was the one she had walked bride in, and Harvey's best suit was the one he had been married in. They had four children by that time, and there wasn't no money wasted on them. Most mothers will have something kind of nice for the first baby in 'case they don't have for the second or the third, but Maria's first baby's best dress was a perfectly plain little white slip made out of an old petticoat of hers. I don't believe that she spent three dollars on that child's whole outfit. No ribbons or lace or embroidery or tuckin' or anything for her babies. She was manager, and sartin', Maria was. When her children got older an' began to go to school they was such queerly dressed little things that the other children used to laugh at them. Maria would buy calico by the bolt, because she could get it a quarter of a cent cheaper on the yard that way, and she said it out to better advantage, and she would make all of her little girls' dresses and her own dresses and the shirts for her husband and little boys of that calico as long as it lasted, and they looked so queer all rigged out in the same kind of calico. It wasn't no way to do."

"No, it was not."

"Well, Maria did it all the same. Then they lived on the plainest things. She hardly ever used an egg."

They had more than a hundred hens and eggs were bringin' only eight cents a dozen. They used the choicest brown sugar, and I tell you her cakes and doughnuts and turnovers, bread and molasses was about as rich a desert as they ever got, although I think that they did have pie on Sundays. I don't suppose that their children ever got two pounds of candy all told in five years. I tell you when Maria came home from town there wasn't no runnin' out to meet her on the part of her children and no gatherin' 'round to see what she had brought 'em. She didn't waste no money bringin' 'em anything. She was manager, Maria was."

"Poor little things!"

"That's what I say. La, I remember as well how when I was a little girl and my father and mother went to town that me and my little brothers and sisters used to run a mile or more down the dusty road to meet them and see what they had brought us, and they always had something. Maybe it was only five cents' worth of candy, but it made us happy. I don't take much to make a lot of little children happy, and what's the good of livin' if you don't make any one, not even your own children, happy?"

I'm glad my mother didn't manage so close that she couldn't spare a little money to make her children happy. Well, when Maria's two boys were big fellows of 17 and 18 they never knew what it was to have a dime of their own to do as they wanted with. Nearly all of the farmers' round here would let boys of that age go to town of a Saturday afternoon and give them 50 cents for spendin' money if they worked good and faithful all the rest of the week. But Maria Kent said that was all nonsense, and her boys worked as hard as long on Saturday as on any other day. I remember the Fourth of July when we had the grandest picnic and celebration ever held in this county in the big grove just beyond the Kent's cornfield, and if Maria didn't make her two boys work in that cornfield all day right therein sight of all that merrymakin', she thought that celebration the Fourth was a waste of time and money, and I don't reckon that one of her children ever had a firecracker in all the time they were under her roof. She was manager and layin' up money, Maria Kent was. I couldn't tell you in a month of Sundays of all the ways that woman managed. They was ways that I couldn't have practiced and kept my self-respect, although no one could say that they were really dishonest. Her whole household had to work. Why, her little girl of five had to sew so many pounds of carpet rags every week, and the little thing never had so much as a rag doll in all her life. They didn't keep Christmas at Maria's. That, too, was a waste of time and money."

"Well, how did they come out in the end?"

"Just as you might expect. Joe, the oldest boy, didn't answer one mornin' when his mother called him at four o'clock to begin milkin' the two cows he had to milk alone before breakfast. And he wasn't in his bed when Maria called up to roust him out. He'd skipped out, and it was three years before they ever heard a thing from him, and then they heard that he was away out west and that he was kind of 'runnin' wild out there. I should think he would, after escapin' from the shackles that had been kept on him at home. The other children stayed at home until the oldest girl run off and married one of our farmer boys, and it wasn't long after that before the other boy and the other girl left home. The girl went to live with her sister and the boy went to the city and got a place in a store, and Harvey and Maria was left alone to rail against the ingratitude of their children. But Maria kept right on 'managin' until she took pneumonia one winter and died in three days. She was all run down with overwork, and had not strength to contend against the disease, and it took her right off. Harvey had never been over and above strong, and he went into gallop' consumption all of a sudden, and died six months after Maria."

"And now, if you'll believe me, that pair left an estate of over $40,000! They'd never spent a cent they wasn't actually compelled to. They never hired any help or give themselves or their children any pleasures. They had just worked and managed. Well, now, if their children didn't make that money fly I can't say it! My land, it would of made Maria turn over in her grave if she could of seen her boy Will learn' round in a $300 buggy with a $100 horse to it! And the girls come out in silk and satin! I tell you, but they made up for lost time and opportunities when they got that money into their own hands. Never having had any money before, they didn't have any sense about how to use it when they had a lot to do as they pleased with. That's the way it generally is with children who are managed as Maria Kent managed hers. Thank goodness, my mother never managed that way—heaven bless her! She and my dear old father spent all that they well could for their happiness and for the happiness of their children. None of us ever wanted to run away from home, and we were taught the value of money by being given it to spend. If we didn't spend it wisely we were taught in a kind and lovin' way how to make good use of it."

"Oh, yes, Maria Kent was a good manager, but I hope her kind won't increase very fast. Yes, thank you I will have another piece of pie and just half a cup of tea to wash it down. There, that is a great plenty. Some to me that you do make the fastest pie crust I ever eat. I must get your receipt."—Detroit Free Press.

A NEW SANDWICH.

Might Have Made Its Inventor Rich If Properly Launched.

There are ham sandwiches and salmon sandwiches and cheese sandwiches and several other kinds of sandwiches—a downtown restaurant advertises 30 varieties—but the latest is the ice cream sandwich. As a new fad the ice cream sandwich might have made thousands of dollars for its inventor had the novelty been launched by a well-known caterer, but strangely enough, says the New York Mail and Express, the ice cream sandwich made its debut in an humble Bowery push cart, and is sold for a penny.

The idea is worthy of a better field, for the ice cream sandwich is not only a distinct novelty, but it has merit of its own. It will be appreciated by the child who on having ice cream for the first time wanted to have it warmed. While losing nothing of its flavor, the thin wafers which go to make up the sandwich help to modify the coolness of the ice cream, so that it can be eaten more readily. The ice cream sandwich, as made on the Bowery, is constructed in this wise: A thin milk biscuit is placed in a tin mold just large enough to receive it. Then the mold is filled with ice cream from a freezer, and another wafer is placed on top. There is an arrangement for forcing the sandwich out of the mold when complete, and the whole process takes only a few seconds. The ice cream sandwich maker is the envy of all the other push cart restaurateurs on the Bowery, as it has all the patrons he can attend to, and the cart is always surrounded by curious customers.

HAWAIIAN FISH.

Several New Species Found—A Good Field for Scientific Study.

In all 42 species of labrals and searoids were obtained. The large percentage of these that appear to be new would indicate that these islands and their neighbors lying west and south form a most interesting field for the study of these forms. While this fauna has already received the attention of Bleeker, Günther, (on Garrett's collection and drawings), Steadman and other ichthyologists, our knowledge of it is only in its beginning.

The fishes of these groups were mainly obtained from the market in Honolulu, which is supplied by the native fishermen. The species are all valued highly by the native Hawaiians as foods, the searoids especially. Some small specimens of the latter bring large prices. They are eaten raw by the natives, as are most of the other fishes, cooking being regarded as especially inimical to the food qualities of a seafood. The Honolulu fish market is the richest source of the collector's material. Fishermen who know the habits and haunts of these fishes, and who have great skill in catching them, are urged to bring them here by the high price and ready sale of these forms.—United States Fish Commission Bulletin.

BIG BUILDINGS THAT TRAVEL.

Remarkable Ingenuity of the American Engineer Demonstrated.

The ingenuity of American engineers has made a reputation for the country in no more spectacular matter than in the moving of great buildings from place to place and foreigners seen under weary of expressing their wonderment at and often their entire disbelief in the accounts that are published in the daily papers and technical journals, says the American Architect. At home here we see nothing remarkable in moving a building out of its old home and towing them across, say, bay of San Francisco, or placing one on runners and drawing it across a New York lake, or building special railroad tracks and moving a great hotel several hundred feet back from the ocean, as was done by the agency of forty locomotives, as was done in the case of the Hotel Manhattan.

Even the migration of the buildings of an entire town on wheels, such as was chronicled a few weeks ago, seems to us merely an amusing, but not a particularly unusual, event. Perhaps the longest journey a building ever took was when the old stone jail was moved from New York City to San Francisco, but in this case the building was taken down stone by stone and freighted to the Pacific coast round the Horn. This event was interesting, too, because it was thought, we believe, that the stones were jostled together with cannon balls. The name of the Hotel Pelham, Boston, will always be familiar in the annals of building, as that was the first large masonry building that was moved horizontally from its old to its new foundations, although the vertical jacking up of masonry buildings was not a novelty.

So, too, the fame of the Carnegie library building at Pittsburgh is likely to be similarly remembered, if its projected removal is actually carried out, for it seems hardly likely that an attempt will ever be made to move so large and complicated a building so great a distance under circumstances so little advantageous. In speaking of these audacious undertakings, we must not forget that among the most dangerous and delicate of them all are the movings of several great mill chimneys, stalks, and, perhaps, the re-erection of the same in the same category the moving, floating to position, and sinking of the caissons for light houses, as at Diamond Shoals, Cape Hatteras and elsewhere. It is in the performance of such feats as these that the architect is the first to appreciate and applaud the skill of the engineer.

One of the most recent examples of this kind of building is the Hotel Walden, Brooklyn, Mass., a structure that has had a most disastrous career, although a short one—it was begun only in the year 1897—it having already once been removed back on its lot for a distance of 20 feet, owing to a relocation of the street building line. The unusual character of the operation attracted the attention of the public as well as the local building department, and criticism soon became frequent, as structural defects due to uneven settlement began to declare themselves. Finally, the matter caught the attention of the state inspector of buildings, with the consequence that the owners of the building, an apartment house, were required to vacate it while further attempts were made to restore it to usefulness. These proved fruitless, and after the unfortunate building had costumed over a hundred thousand dollars of the owners' money, it was abandoned to the mortgagee, who has just sold the property to new owners for about a third of its cost.

An attempt is now to be made to move the building, which weighs some 40,000 tons through a distance of one hundred and thirty feet, to a new foundation prepared for it on a somewhat better site. So far as the moving is concerned, there are no unusual problems involved except those required in bracing and tying together a somewhat dislocated structure. The most interesting features on the possibility of preparing a permanently good foundation, and as the new owners have got the property at bargain rates, they have a large margin to consume on moving operations and the new foundations before their investment passes the fair income returning limit, so the structure is likely to have a long and useful career yet.

Democratic Precinct Committeemen To Be ElectedEntire Reorganization of the Party Machinery Decried By Convention.

Under the rules adopted by the Democratic State Convention last June the Democrats of the State will select new precinct committeemen on Monday, November 19. The procedure prescribed is as follows:

That hereafter whenever a vacancy occurs in any of the county or legislative district committees the same shall be filled by the Democrats of the precinct after ten days notice, duly signed by the chairman and secretary of said committee, as to the time and place of holding said meeting for said purpose shall have been posted. Provided, that on the third Monday of November, 1906, the Democrats of this state shall meet at their various voting precincts at the hour of 1 o'clock p. m., and proceed to select a committeeman to serve a term of four years, and that on the Monday following such precinct committeemen shall meet at their various county seats and organize by electing a chairman and secretary of said county or district committee who may not be a member of said committee. The chairman of any member of said committee may be removed for cause by a majority thereof.

The chairman or a majority thereof said committee may call a meeting of the same whenever they deem it necessary.

Vacancies occurring in any of said committees after the reorganization herein provided for, shall be filled as hereinbefore set forth.

If, after notice as aforesaid, there shall be no election held in any precinct, then the State central committee of the district, on recommendation of the chairman, or in the event he does not act within ten days after such failure of election, on recommendation of a majority of the committee of the county, fill such vacancy by the appointment of a Democrat of such precinct.

This amendment shall not apply to cities of the first and second classes.

SOLOMONIC DECISION

Custody of the Gant Child Given Alternately to Father and Mother.

The habeas corpus proceeding of T. L. Gant, the young Hopkinsville merchant, instituted for the possession of his six-year-old boy, after consuming two days in the circuit court, was disposed of by Special Judge W. S. Morrison Saturday afternoon. The custody of the child was awarded to the father for six weeks and to the mother eight weeks alternately.

Upon the hearing of this proceeding some interesting and rather sensational evidence was introduced which proves that Mrs.
Davidson, the respondent to the suit, has figured in another divorce proceeding even more sensational than the one she has now instituted against John Davidson, of Hawsville, in which she alleges she was secretly married to him in Indiana last spring.

From the proof in the habeas corpus proceeding it was developed that T. L. Gant was married in 1903 at Clarksville, Tenn., to the present Mrs. Davidson, who was then Miss Mabel Young, a daughter of Zeno M. Young, of Madisonville. She was beautiful, attractive and very accomplished as a young girl. They married and settled at Hickton, in Todd county, where Mr. Gant conducted a mercantile business.

The trial of this writ disclosed the fact that a contract was entered into in 1897 between Mr. Gant and his wife as the settlement of a divorce suit which was then pending and which was brought by Mr.
Gant against his wife. The cause alleged in the original divorce suit, it is understood, was infidelity on the part of the wife. This case was never tried. The contract which was produced was to settle their differences without making public the real facts that caused the separation. It appears from the wording of the contract that certain letters written by Mrs. Gant to a well known man in that section of that state, together with his letters to her, were found by Mr.

Gant and confirmed in his mind that his wife was untrue to him.
Rather than disclose all the facts and drag the family skeleton from the closet, the matters were arbitrated, and by Judge C. J. Pratt a witness for the petitioner, it was shown that this contract exhibited in evidence, was the result of the arbitration. By its terms the original suit for divorce was not to be prosecuted to judgment, but an amended petition was filed alleging abandonment only and she was to make no claim for alimony. But as he had abandoned her, he could not sue under the contract, and she brought the suit, he made no defense and the divorce was granted.

This contract also provided that Mr. Gant should have the custody of the child and that when he allowed it to visit her, she was to sign an agreement providing for its return upon a stated time. But she would not stand by this agreement and the last time she took the child she would not give it up at all and this habeas corpus writ ensued.

The trial of the case, as stated above, lasted two days. The attorneys engaged were Capt. W. T.
Ellis for the plaintiff and Geo. W.
Jolly for the defendant. They consumed practically all of Saturday in argument, discussing, incidentally, the city council, the water works bond proposition and even the Goebel election law. At 4 p. m. the court adjourned from the darkened court room and an hour later decided the case as follows:

"It is adjudged by the court that the best interests of the said Edwin Y. Gant require that his care and custody be awarded to his father, T. L. Gant, and his mother, Mabel Davis, alias Davidson, as follows:
That his father shall have his care and custody from the 20th day of November, 1906, for a period of six weeks, and thus to be alternated between them. The writ is dismissed with the cost of the complainant."

Mr. Gant since the divorce was granted, has married again.

The trial attracted the closest attention of many members of the

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because to deceive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.
Then the richness of the blood—the albumen leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Klinger's Swamp-Root the new discoverer of the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address bar, but there were few other auditors. Of these the most interested listener was Mr. John Davidson, who is claimed by Mrs. Mabel Gant as her recently and clandestinely acquired husband. Mr.

Davidson spent the day listening to the arguments in the case. He is here for the purpose of preparing his answer to the divorce suit filed by Mrs. Davidson and would not talk for publication, but it is understood that in his answer he will deny the clandestine marriage to the former Mrs. Gant. The marriage record offered by Mrs. Gant, or Davidson, shows that she was married to "John Davis," and he will deny that he is the person referred to.

The case, it will be seen, has many complex situations.
A striking and significant feature of the testimony in the habeas corpus case was the little bright-eyed boy himself and his statements.
One of the latter was that he did not know his father, who was then present in the court. The father said to him: "Who told you to say that?" "Mama," answered the little fellow, promptly.—Owensboro Messenger.

AN INTERESTING CLOCK.

Combines Many Features of World's Most Remarkable Timepieces.

Messrs. William Potts & Sons, the well-known clock makers of Leeds, England, have just constructed for that city what is claimed to be the greatest horological achievement of the century. The clock is a huge one, and in it are combined many features of the most remarkable clocks of the world, such as those at Berne and Strasburg cathedral, says the Scientific American.

The huge clock dial, which is of polished copper with the figures inscribed upon it in blue, is flanked upon either side by a mail-clad knight, each holding above his head a battle-axe, which serves to strike the gongs at the quarters and hours. Above the clock, upon a kind of perch, stands a large cockerel. In front of the dial is a platform.

When the quarters of the hour are reached the mail-clad knights strike their gongs. Immediately on the left hand side of the dial a door opens automatically, and there issues forth a British soldier in full uniform. When he reaches the center of the platform he halts and salutes in precise military manner. He then passes on to the left, and is followed by a killed Highlander, who repeats a similar performance when he reaches the middle of the platform. Then comes an Irishman in the old dress of his country, brandishing a shillelagh; then a Canadian boatman with his paddle, and finally, a Hindoo, wearing his turban and loin cloth. When the figures have passed round the platform they disappear from sight through another door, which closes automatically upon the last figure's exit. Then the cockerel overhead flaps its wings, raises its head, and gives three lusty crows. The figures are manufactured of copper, bronze, while many of the other parts of the clock are constructed from gun metal. The escapement is the double three-legged gravely by Lord Grimthorpe, who is probably the greatest living authority on clocks and bells.

DEMANDS ON MOROCCO

Battleship Kentucky's Presence at Tangier Will Have Influence.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The instructions of the State Department to United States Consul Gunner, at Tangier, under which he acted yesterday, were to collect an indemnity from the Moorish Government for the murder of Marcus Essagin, a naturalized American citizen, who was killed about a year ago by a mob. Essagin became involved in an altercation with a Moor against whom he had accidentally run, when a crowd of the Moor's comrades fell upon him and beat him to death. The Moorish Government disclaimed responsibility for mob violence of this kind, but the United States Government contended that the Moorish Government had failed in its obligations in declining to take any steps to punish the perpetrators of the crime. Now Mr. Gunner is directed again to present the case with an urgent request for a settlement. It now happens that the big battleship Kentucky is making her way through the Mediterranean to Manila, and if she touches at a Moorish port, as she would be likely to do, her presence may have a beneficial effect in stimulating action upon the Consul's demands.

"BOB WHITE".

Kentucky Quail More Numerous Than For Several Seasons.

The open season for shooting quail begins in Kentucky next Thursday and will last until the end of the year. The quail crop all over the State is reported better this fall than for many seasons and the shooting of "Bob White" promises to be fine. A large number of young birds are reported, showing that the second brood hatched out well, and as there seems to be no end of partridges, there also promises to be an abundance of hunting between next Thursday and Jan. 1, 01.

In this county birds are said to be abundant and local sports are preparing for the fun in store. Local hardware establishments are doing a good business in the way of fitting out hunters and several parties will be made up in this county to "hackle" the fields early Thursday morning.

There has been little to deter the growth of the young birds, but as there are no game Wardens in Western Kentucky to protect quail, pot hunters no doubt will have bagged many birds before the open season begins.

Too Much Pork, Not Enough Fat.

Without doubt the fat in pork is about as hard to digest as anything can be. A person has to have a strong digestion and must be engaged in hard work in order to take care of this food, although it is true a large number of persons depend upon it especially through the cold weather. The fact is, however, that as a rule fat is largely deficient in our food; that is, a fat which can be easily digested and promptly assimilated by the system. Cod liver oil, as we find it in Scott's Emulsion, is the most easily digested of all fats; it is just the food the body must have to give it nerve power, brain power and digestive power.

Steel Billet Pool is to be Organized.

New York, Nov. 8.—It is learned from a trustworthy source that a meeting of representatives of the steel companies has just been held in this city. Steps were taken some time ago to effect the proposed steel billet pool and two meetings for drawing up and adopting agreements under which the pool could be formed have since been held. What action was taken at the latest meeting can not be learned. It is known that nothing definite was done at the previous meeting, as it was desired to defer action until after the election. Rumors have been current for some time that the price of steel billets would be advanced to $30 a ton. The present price is $18.50.
